TWO THIRD OF VOTE REPORTS SHOWS MARGIN

Although Hoover Forces Refuse To Admit Defeat Until Count's Made.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 9 —Oscar G. Foellinger, Indiana manager of Herbert Hoover's candidacy for the Republican nomination for president today refused to concede that United States Senator James E Watson had defeated Hoover in the Indiana primary election yesterday.

"The returns from a number of Hoover strongholds are very incomplete and Hoover is only a little behind Watson at present," Foellinger said.

Foellinger pointed out that returns from Delaware, Madison and Lake counties, admittedly Hover districts, were far from complete.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 9—United States Senator James E Watson, apparently has defeated Herbert Hoover for Indiana's presidential endorsement on the basis of unofficial returns received today from nearly two-thirds of the state's 3,610 precincts in yesterday's primary election.

Reports received early today from 2,040 precincts gave Senator Watson a lead of about 8.000 votes over the secretary of commerce. The totals were: Watson, 103,466; Hoover, 95,046.

M Burt Thurman, Watson manager, today claimed the state by 25,000 majority.

Robinson Ahead

United States Senator Arthur R. Robinson this morning was running two to one over the total vote of his two opponents, Attorney General Arthur L Gillion and Former Judge Solon J Carter, and probably was assured of renomination.

Albert Stump was leading Walter Myers, his nearest opponent more than two to one for the Democratic gubernatorial races probably will be determined in state conventions. For the party vote was so split between the record number of 17 candidates that none this morning had the necessary majority in the primary struggle.

Landis Runs Strong

The strength of Frederick Landis, Logansport editor, was the biggest surprise of the gubernatorial contest. He was running second only to Secretary of State Frederick E. Schortemeier, the organization man, with Thomas H. Adams, crusading Vincennes publisher, third.

Heavy returns from the urban districts gave Hoover a comfortable lead over Watson, but shortly after midnight the senator's strength in the rural precincts began to be heard from sending him into the lead. Hoover swept the industrial district of northern Indiana, but was halted as he reached the agricultural plains of central and southern Indiana.

Hoover apparently has carried the following counties. Allen, Elkhart, Grant, Howard, Huntington, Lake, LaPorte, St Joseph, Wayne and Wabash.

CAROL PREPARES TO DEPART FROM BRITAIN'S SOIL

But Just Where Ousted Prince Will Go Is a Mystery Now.

LONDON. May 9 —Prince Carol of Roumania was making preparations today to leave England, but just where he will go could not be learned.

He is rather wrought up over the British order expelling him from the country according to friends. However, he has made no attempt at official explanation which might in some way answer the claims of the government that he was using his temporary residence at Godstone as a base for disemminating propaganda.

He is welcome in France, provided he refrains from indulging in any practices similar to those which got him into trouble here. the French foreign office stated yesterday.

But should he attempt to go back to Roumania, he will find himself up against a stone wall Government officials in Bucharest dismissed Carol's threat to return to Roumania as a "mere bluff," in view of the fact that the present party is reported as indifferent to his return and not in favor of backing him if he does.

FIREMEN PREVENT DESTRUCTION OF VALENTINE HOME

Prompt and efficient work by the Circleville fire department prevented the destruction of the home of George Valentine, E. Main-st, Tuesday afternoon.

The department received a call at 3 55 from the Valentine residence, and found a shed, used to store scaffolding by Marion and Barnes, contractors, ablaze. The shed and an adjoining structure used to store coal were destroyed.

The roof of the Valentine home was burned. All of the household furnishings were saved.

Loss on the sheds is estimated at $250, covered by insurance from the Hummel and Plum agency.

Sparks from the shed fire carried across the Pennsylvania tracks and set fire to the roof of a summer kitchen owned by H. P. Denny. The damage is estimated at $10.

TRESTLE AFIRE, TRAINS DELAYED

Trains were tied up on the Pennsylvania railroad here Tuesday from noon until 6 00 p.m. by a fire on the railroad bridge over the Scioto river.

The trestle had evidently been set ablaze by the 9.30 passenger train in the morning, and a smouldering fire developed into a stubborn blaze before it was discovered.

Railroad employees were called and a volunteer bucket bridage was formed, until Chief Wise of the Circleville fire department arrived to help put out the fire.

The bucket bridage, composed of spectators experienced difficulty in getting the water from the river up to the bridge.

Chief Wise and his men used hose, which was attached to the tender of an engine, and also chemicals and were compelled to work from 3 to 6 o'clock before the fire was extinguished.

The alarm was spread first by a fisherman

The loss is estimated at $250

The delayed trains were held up at Circleville and Williamsport.

American Cows Have No Equals

WASHINGTON, May 9—The American cow has no peer in the world today as a producer.

In 1926 the great cow family served up to the public 226,000,000,000 pounds of milk There were 189 cows to every 1,000 consumers. In 1916 there were 225 cows to each 1,000 consumers and produced 80,000,000,000 pounds of milk.

These facts were given to the United States Chamber of Commerce Wednesday by A. J. Glover, of Fort Atkinson, Wis. He held up to the business men the example of Mrs. Cow, whose production has greatly increased and whose numbers are decreasing.

The dairy industry income in 1926 was given as $3,313,000,000.

JURY DISAGREES AND MRS. KNAPP NEARS COLLAPSE

Woman Charged With State Theft Sinks Into Chair As Re-trial Is Set.

ALBANY, N Y, May 9 —Faced with a second trial on May 21, on the charge that she stole census money, former Secretary of State Florence E. S. Knapp, New York's first woman official, today was reported in a state bordering on collapse.

After deliberating eight hours, the supreme court jury before whom Mrs. Knapp had been on trial for a solid week, filed into the jury box just a few minutes past midnight last night and reporter a disagreement.

Although she had hoped for an acquittal, Mrs. Knapp smiled. Then came the shock which swept away the iron nerve that had carried her so successfully through seven days of gruelling trial. Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan set the second trial for May 21.

The woman, who at the height of her political power a few years ago had sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was crushed.

She sank back into her chair, and for a moment it appeared she might faint. Her face turned ashen.

Her only comment was:

"I have nothing to say."

The prosecution also appeared greatly surprised by Justice Callaghan's announcement that Mrs Knapp would have to stand trial a second time on the charge that she stole a $2,875 census check issued in the name of her step-daughter, Clara Blanche Knapp, middle-aged Vermont college instructor.

The first ballot taken by the jury after it retired for deliberation at 2:30 yesterday afternoon stood nine to three for conviction, it was learned. The last ballot stood six to six.

Twelve indictments were returned against Mrs. Knapp charging her with juggling the $1,200,000 census fund, but the one upon which she was tried charged her with stealing her step-daughter's $2 875 check and of using it in partial payment for a $3,000 bill

MORE BRAINS NEEDED TODAY TO HELP FARM

So Pickaway-Co. Master Farmer Says In Paper Before Commercial Club.

"Brains In Agriculture" was the subject of an address given recently before members of the Ohio Vegetable Growers' association by Walter J. Marion, master farmer, Pickaway-co's representative to the legislature, and president of the association.

The society thought so well of this speech it was reproduced in pamphlet form and printed in the proceedings of the 13th annual meeting.

Mr. Marion read the article before the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night. It carries plenty of thought for the farmer and coming as it does from a master farmer it is worthy of real consideration. The paper follows:

In order the more fully to understand our subject let us go back forty years ago and study the field of Agriculture at that time. In that day 75 per cent or more of the total population of Ohio lived on the farms. The land was still new and thousands and thousands of acres were still in timber. The farmer's family did all of the work on the farm, and consumed nearly everything that they produced

In that day they had the little red schoolhouse and very few high schools and colleges. Only a few months out of each year the farmer's children attended the one-room district school, if at all.

They had no roads to speak of. The mode of travel was very slow They traveled in two-horse wagons or the so-called express wagons Buggies were scarce and crude. The pioneer of that recent day had no Rural Free Delivery of mail from which to glean the daily news of the affairs of state, [illegible] science or industry nor telephones over which they might receive the latest information of local happenings however trivial or important.

He had nothing to work with but a lot of crude machinery. About once a week he drove to town with his extra produce to trade with the grocer for the few necessities that he could not produce on the farm. Farm life was apparently a real drudgery and took real man power to operate a farm.

Occasionally when one of the [illegible]

ADMINISTRATION VICTORY IS SEEN IN FIGHT ON TAX

Insurgent Group Rallies To Defense and Reductions Are Beat Down.

WASHINGTON, May 9 — The administration appeared well on its way today to a smashing victory in the senate in its fight to place a $203,000,000 limit on tax reduction.

On the first three test votes, the insurgent group rallied to the administration's defense and beat down Democratic proposals for greater tax reduction. The margin was close on all three votes, but the administration won and there were many indications it would continue to win throughout the tax fight in the senate.

The surtax rates, bone of contention between the two major parties were to be considered today with prospects of a vote before nightfull. Both the administration and Democratic plans call for a $25,000,000 slash but the plans differ in extending the relief. The Democrats proposed a greater reduction in surtaxes on the brackets between $12.000 and $52 000 while the Republicans would grant greater relief to the brackets above $52,000.

There was a possibility the insurgents might break away from the administration on this long item, because their votes would not change the amount of reduction. If they do join the minority it would give the Democrats probably their only important victory in the tax row

The senate's action represented a $17,000,000 reduction in present taxes, as compared to the house's in enacting an $8,000,000 slash on this item.

The senate also voted 38 to 35 to retain the present 10 per cent tax on club dues, although the house allowed a $5 000,000 slash by cutting the tax in half. The Democrats then attempted to repeal the entire tax but this amendment lost 38 to 40

The administration forces were [illegible] on the last votes They rejected the final enactment by the senate of a bill limiting tax reduction to $218,000,000, as compared to the $336,000,000 slash proposed by the Democrats and the $250,000,000 slash enacted by the house The final bill must be a compromise between the senate and that set by the house and indications now point to a slash of about $230,000,000

TWO NATIONS AT POINT OF BIG STRUGGLE

Mere Technicality Separates Powers From Formal War In Orient.

WASHINGTON, May 9—Only a technicality of international law stands today between the military reality of war and the diplomatic fiction of peace in the Orient.

Neither China nor Japan has formally declared war, but 70,000 troops of the two powers are in and enroute to the Tsinan zone which has already reported casualties on both sides.

Unconcealed defiance by the Chinese Nationalist troops of the 24-hour Japanese ultimatum demanding withdrawal from the vital Tsinan area has left the armed forces of the two nations sole arbiters of the gravest crisis in China since the days of the boxer uprisings, more than a quarter of a century ago.

A new Japanese division of 16,000 troops is enroute from Nagoya, Japan, to Tsingtau, key port of Shantung province, in which approximately 10,000 troops of Nippon already are in service.

Japan has served notice upon Chiang Kai Shek, Nationalist Generalissimo, that no further negotiation will be conducted between the army commanders at Tsinan, the scene of clashes during the last four days.

All communications from Tsinan are in the hands of the Japanese, the Chinese wireless station there having been destroyed by Japanese artillery fire.

Baron Matsudaira, the Japanese ambassador, has informed Secretary of State Kellogg that the new troops contingents from Japan are being moved solely to protect the Tsingtau-Tsinan railroad.

Whether Japan's iron hand on the vital railroad constitutes an act of war against China is a question on which diplomats disagree. Those who favor Japanese occupation of the entire province of Shantung, with its 40,000,000 population, assert that Japan is acting within her rights under the nine-power Washington treaty of 1922. Advocates of the Nationalist cause unhesitatingly describe the Japanese occupation of the vital railroad area an act of war.

LONDON, May 9—The Japanese government today denied that troops were being dispatched to China for the purpose of occupying the area about the Shantung railroad, part of which runs from Tsing-Tao to Tsinan, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Tokio.

LONDON, May 9.—Anti-Japanese feeling is flaming throughout south China as a result of the warfare between Japanese and Chinese Nationalist troops in the Shantung peninsula.

The Japanese consul general at Canton has warned Japanese residents to take refuge at Shameen although there appears to be no immediate danger, said an exchange telegraph dispatch from Canton today.

There are nearly 10,000 Japanese troops at Tsinan (Tsinanfu), capital of Shantung province, at Tsintao, the port terminal of the Shantung railroad and scattered along the railway line to prevent its destruction by Chinese. About 18 000 additional Japanese troops are expected in Shantung within the next week.

However, he has made no attempt at official explanation which might in some way answer the claims of the government that he was using his temporary residence at Godstone as a base for disemminating propaganda.

He is welcome in France, provided he refrains from indulging in any practices similar to those which got him into trouble here, the French foreign office stated yesterday.

But should he attempt to go back to Roumania, he will find himself up against a stone wall. Government officials in Bucharest dismissed Carol's threat to return to Roumania as a "mere bluff," in view of the fact that the present party is reported as indifferent to his return and not in favor of backing him if he does.

FIREMEN PREVENT DESTRUCTION OF VALENTINE HOME

Prompt and efficient work by the Circleville fire department prevented the destruction of the home of George Valentine, E. Main-st, Tuesday afternoon.

The department received a call at 3:55 from the Valentine residence, and found a shed, used to store scaffolding by Marion and Barnes, contractors, ablaze. The shed and an adjoining structure used to store coal were destroyed.

The roof of the Valentine home was burned. All of the household furnishings were saved.

Loss on the sheds is estimated at $250, covered by insurance from the Hummel and Plum agency.

Sparks from the shed fire carried across the Pennsylvania tracks and set fire to the roof of a summer kitchen owned by H. P. Denny. The damage is estimated at $10.

TRESTLE AFIRE, TRAINS DELAYED

Trains were tied up on the Pennsylvania railroad here Tuesday from noon until 6:00 p.m. by a fire on the railroad bridge over the Scioto river.

The trestle had evidently been set ablaze by the 9:30 passenger train in the morning, and a smouldeling fire developed into a stubborn blaze before it was discovered.

Railroad employees were called and a volunteer bucket bridage was formed, until Chief Wise of the Circleville fire department arrived to help put out the fire.

The bucket bridage, composed of spectators, experienced difficulty in getting the water from the river up to the bridge.

Chief Wise and his men used hose, which was attached to the tender of an engine, and also chemicals and were compelled to work from 3 to 6 o'clock before the fire was extinguished.

The alarm was spread first by a fisherman.

The loss is estimated at $250

The delayed trains were held up at Circleville and Williamsport.

American Cows Have No Equals

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The American cow has no peer in the world today as a producer.

In 1926 the great cow family served up to the public 226,000,000,000 pounds of milk. There were 189 cows to every 1,000 consumers. In 1916 there were 225 cows to each 1,000 consumers and produced 80,000,000,000 pounds of milk.

These facts were given to the United States Chamber of Commerce Wednesday by A. J. Glover, of Fort Atkinson, Wis. He held up to the business men the example of Mrs. Cow, whose production has greatly increased and whose numbers are decreasing.

The dairy industry income in 1926 was given as $3,313,000,000.

JURY DISAGREES AND MRS. KNAPP NEARS COLLAPSE

Woman Charged With State Theft Sinks Into Chair As Re-trial Is Set.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 9 —Faced with a second trial on May 21, on the charge that she stole census money, former Secretary of State Florence E. S. Knapp, New York's first woman official, today was reported in a state bordering on collapse.

After deliberating eight hours, the supreme court jury before whom Mrs. Knapp had been on trial for a solid week, filed into the jury box just a few minutes past midnight last night and reporter a disagreement.

Although she had hoped for an acquittal, Mrs. Knapp smiled. Then came the shock which swept away the iron nerve that had carried her so successfully through seven days of gruelling trial.. Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan set the second trial for May 21.

The woman, who at the height of her political power a few years ago had sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was crushed.

She sank back into her chair, and for a moment it appeared she might faint. Her face turned ashen.

Her only comment was:

"I have nothing to say."

The prosecution also appeared greatly surprised by Justice Callaghan's announcement that Mrs. Knapp would have to stand trial a second time on the charge that she stole a $2,875 census check issued in the name of her stepdaughter, Clara Blanche Knapp, middle-aged Vermont college instructor.

The first ballot taken by the jury after it retired for deliberation at 2:30 yesterday afternoon stood nine to three for conviction, it was learned. The last ballot stood six to six.

Twelve indictments were returned against Mrs. Knapp charging her with juggling the $1,200,000 census fund, but the one upon which she was tried charged her with stealing her step-daughter's $2,875 check and of using it in partial payment for a $3,000 bill.

HENRY IS GIVEN OLD HORSE CAR; RELIC OF 1868

NEW YORK , May 9— Henry Ford is the owner today of a horse car presented to him in front of the Brooklyn City Railroad-Co's. barn.

The car, known as a "Jigger," is a relic of 1868. It was in service for 29 years and is the oldest of its kind in existence.

"I accept this rare old relic for the Dearborn museum, which Mr. Edsel Ford and myself are building for posterity," Ford said.

That was all. It was enough, however, for the thousands who had gathered in front of the barn. They cheered the motor magnate long and loudly.

Ford posed on the front platform of the car, while movie cameras took in the scene. As the old car got in motion with a series of violent jerks and lurches, Ford took the lines from the driver's hands and the car rolled smoothly.

MORE BRAINS NEEDED TODAY TO HELP FARM

So Pickaway-Co. Master Farmer Says In Paper Befor Commercial Club.

"Brains In Agriculture" was the subject of an address given recently before members of the Ohio Vegetable Growers' association by Walter J. Marion, master farmer, Pickaway-co's representative to the legislature, and president of the association.

The society thought so well of this speech it was reproduced in pamphlet form and printed in the proceedings of the 13th annual meeting.

Mr. Marion read the article before the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night. It carries plenty of thought for the farmer and coming as it does from a master farmer it is worthy of real consideration. The paper follows:

In order the more fully to understand our subject let us go back forty years ago and study the field of Agriculture at that time. In that day 75 per cent or more of the total population of Ohio lived on the farms. The land was still new and thousands and thousands of acres were still in timber. The farmer's family did all of the work on the farm, and consumed nearly everything that they produced.

In that day they had the little red schoolhouse and very few high schools and colleges. Only a few months out of each year the farmer's children attended the one-room district school, if at all.

They had no roads to speak of. The mode of travel was very slow. They traveled in two-horse wagons or the so-called express wagons. Buggies were scarce and crude. The pioneer of that recent day had no Rural Free Delivery of mail from which to glean the daily news of the affairs of state, religion, science or industry, nor telephones over which they might receive the latest information of local happenings, however trivial or important.

He had nothing to work with but a lot of crude machinery. About once a week he drove to town with his extra produce to trade with the grocer for the mere necessities that he could not produce on the farm. Farm life was apparently a real drudgery and it took real man power to operate a farm.

Occasionally when one child showed unusual talent that child

ADMINISTRATION VICTORY IS SEEN IN FIGHT ON TAX

Insurgent Group Rallies To Defense and Reductions Are Beat Down.

WASHINGTON, May 9 — The administration appeared well on its way today to a smashing victory in the senate in its fight to place a $203,000,000 limit on tax reduction.

On the first three test votes, the insurgent group rallied to the administration's defense and beat down Democratic proposals for greater tax reduction. The margin was close on all three votes, but the administration won and there were many indications it would continue to win throughout the tax fight in the senate.

The surtax rates, bone of contention between the two major parties were to be considered today with prospects of a vote before nightfull. Both the administration and Democratic plans call for a $25,000,000 slash but the plans differ in extending the relief. The Democrats proposed a greater reduction in surtaxes on the brackets between $12,000 and $52,000 while the Republicans would grant greater relief to the brackets above $52,000.

There was a possibility the insurgents might break away from the administration on this long item, because their votes would not change the amount of reduction. If they do join the minority it would give the Democrats probably their only important victory in the tax row.

The senate's action represented a $17,000,000 reduction in present taxes, as compared to the house's in enacting an $8,000,000 slash on this item.

The senate also voted 38 to 35 to retain the present 10 per cent tax on club dues, although the house allowed a $5,000,000 slash by cutting the tax in half. The Democrats then attempted to repeal the entire tax but this amendment lost 33 to 40.

The administration forces were jubilant over the test votes. They predicted the final enactment by the senate of a bill limiting tax reduction to $203,000,000, as compared to the $336,000,000 slash proposed by the Democrats and the $289,000,000 slash enacted by the house. The final bill must be a compromise between the senate limit and that set by the house and indications now point to a slash of about $250,000,000.

TWO NATIONS AT POINT OF BIG STRUGGLE

WASHINGTON, May 9—Only a technicality of international law stands today between the military reality of war and the diplomatic fiction of peace in the Orient.

Neither China nor Japan has formally declared war, but 70,000 troops of the two powers are in and enroute to the Tsinan zone which has already reported casualties on both sides.

Unconcealed defiance by the Chinese Nationalist troops of the 24-hour Japanese ultimatum demanding withdrawal from the vital Tsinan area has left the armed forces of the two nations sole arbiters of the gravest crisis in China since the days of the boxer uprisings, more than a quarter of a century ago.

A new Japanese division of 16,000 troops is enroute from Nagoya, Japan, to Tsingtau, key port of Shantung province, in which approximately 10,000 troops of Nippon already are in service.

Japan has served notice upon Chiang Kai Shek, Nationalist Generalissino, that no further negotiation will be conducted between the army commanders at Tsinan, the scene of clashes during the last four days.

All communications from Tsinan are in the hands of the Japanese, the Chinese wireless station there having been destroyed by Japanese artillery fire.

Baron Matsudaira, the Japanese ambassador, has informed Secretary of State Kellogg that the new troops contingents from Japan are being moved solely to protect the Tsingtau-Tsinan railroad.

Whether Japan's iron nand on the vital railroad constitutes an act of war against China is a question on which diplomats disagree. Those who favor Japanese occupation of the entire province of Shantung, with its 40,000,000 population, assert that Japan is acting within her rights under the nine-power Washington treaty of 1922. Advocates of the Nationalist cause unhesitatingly describe the Japanese occupation of the vital railroad area an act of war.

LONDON, May 9—The Japanese government today denied that troops were being dispatched to China for the purpose of occupying the area about the Shantung-railroad, part of which runs from Tsing-Tao to Tsinan, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Tokio.

LONDON, May 9.— Anti-Japanese feeling is flaming throughout south China as a result of the warfare between Japanese and Chinese Nationalist troops in the Shantung peninsula.

The Japanese consul general at Canton has warned Japanese residents to take refuge at Shameen although there appears to be no immediate danger, said an exchange telegraph dispatch from Canton today.

There are nearly 10,000 Japanese troops at Tsinan (Tsinanfu), capital of Shantung province, at Tsintao, the port terminal of the Shantung railroad ,and scattered along the railway line to prevent its destruction by Chinese. About 18,000 additional Japanese troops are expected in Shantung within the next week.

BIG FIVE OF AMERICA HAS GOLFING DAY

Bill Melhorn, Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen Turn In Great Scores.

SANDWICH, May 9 — America's Big Five of its invading golf team shot the legs out from under the early finishers in the first round of the British open golf championship today, Bill Mehlhorn shooting a 35-36-71, Gene Sarazen a 35-37-72 and Walter Hagen a 38-37-75. Mehlhorn and Sarazan thus placed themselves one-two in the early going with Hagen hovering in the first five. Abe Mitchell, one of England's main dependencies, shot a 78 while the Americans were firing their competitive Roman candles.

Mehlhorn simply ran riot through the round approaching with startling accuracy and dropping putts of all sizes and angles. This kind of play carried him to the turn in 35, one over the seemingly immune par for the outgoing nine. By comparison, Sarazen's was a fighting round, for the wind often carried him away from his objective and he had to make startling recoveries to stay near par. In addition he was none too lucky during the homecoming journey. Hagen's 75 represented what might be termed ordinary but steady golf. Walter, however, was putting well, as usual.

Mehlhorn lost his direction in the wind at the 11th but came back at the 12th with a vengeance, getting a 3 as a result of a great iron shot and the sinking of a 25-foot putt. Otherwise Bill's perfect approaching, long drives and sound putting made his play seem uneventful. He experienced almost no difficulty with the tricky greens, only twice taking as many as three putts.

His card.—

Out— 5 3 3 4 4 4 5 5 4—35
In— 4 5 3 4 5 5 3 4 4— 71

Starting for home, Hagen continued to score well, if not sensationally. He got two 4's and a 3 on the first three incoming holes and his gallery began to entertain visions of one of those typical Hagen rushes to the finish. But it was not to be. The Hag, however, supplied a bit of fireworks at both the 11th and 13th. At the former he hit a beautifully crisp iron right on the pin and got a birdie 3 while the 13th saw him put his third into a bunker, chip out and then drop a curly 20-footer right into the can.

His card:

Out— 5 4 4 3 3 3 5 4 5—37
In— 3 3 4 5 5 5 3 4 5—38

HERRON STARTS FIGHT FOR LIFE

NEW PHILADELPHIA, May 9 - Death in the electric chair will be demanded today by Prosecutor James E Patrick in opening the state's case against William D Herron, charged with murder of his sister-in-law, Viola May.

Patrick will base his plea upon the contention that the girl died in Herron's auto following a criminal assault and was afterward thrown into the Tuscarawas river.

Interest in the Herron trial soared anew as the actual fight for the former painter's life was to get under way with the preliminary addresses to the jury by the state and defense.

Early today spectators began arriving in front of the court house in the hope of being admitted to the trial. Scores were facing disappointment as Judge Lindsey has ruled that only 90 persons will be allowed to occupy chairs in the room— the actual seating capacity.

SEQUEL TO "WINGS"

Characterized as the companion picture to "Wings," Paramount's great epic of the air, "The Legion of the Condemned," another story of the War from the standpoint of the aviator, comes to the Metropolitan theatre today for a three days' run.

Here is a story that differs entirely in story content from the famous roadshow, but in color romance, characterization and downright thrills, 'The Legion of the Condemned" has taken its place right up alongside the production which is still standing them up in the larger cities.

Like "Wings," the tale is from the pen of John Monk Saunders, a member of the United States Air corps during the War, and is directed by William Wellman, who saw service with the Lafayette Squadron and who is credited with the direction of "Wings."

The photoplay deals with an unattached flying unit at the French front, composed of men who, because of their dark pasts wanted to die. Their daring exploits were the talk of the War. Nothing was too hazardous as an undertaking. Into this group of men who welcomed death comes Gary Cooper as the young American newspaperman, betrayed by his sweetheart. The high spot shows Cooper forced to carry his ex-sweetheart across the German lines as a spy.

35 EXAMINED BY CLINIC HERE FOR DREADED PLAGUE

Eight Pickaway-Co. Residents Found To Have Tuberculosis, Report Shows.

The tubercular clinic conducted by the state department of health at St Philip's Parish House, closed Wednesday evening having given two days' services to Pickaway-co. The final figures at noon on Wednesday disclosed the fact that there are many unrecognized cases of tuberculosis in Circleville.

There were 33 applicants examined by Dr. F C. Anderson of Mt Vernon, O., and Dr. J A. Frank and 8 were found positive for tuberculosis while ten were classified as suspicious.

If this group can be kept under the supervision of the family physician and the necessary aid given to them as a whole, further development of the disease may be avoided. This aid may be the education of the patient and his family by the family physician, usually through the public health nurse. In some cases sanatorium treatment may be necessary. It is to accomplish such a purpose that the charts with the diagnostic findings, in every case, are referred back to the family physician.

If tuberculosis is to be taken from the class of hopeless diseases, these patients must receive the same careful treatment that would be afforded them in the beginning of an acute illness such as typhoid fever or appendicitis. The personal hygiene of the patient is an important factor in preventing the spread of the disease.

The bacilli bearing discharges from the infected persons are the means of infecting others. These persons must be instructed in the right method of living and in the measures for the prevention of the spread of the disease. If such care can not be effectively given in the home the patient should be urged to enter a sanatorium for treatment and instruction.

WHITE POTATOES SHOW INCREASES, MAINE IS AHEAD

Car Load Shipments Past Year Amount To 251,211 Bureau Finds.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—A study of the white potato industry and the relationship of prices to transportation costs, completed Wednesday by the Bureau of Railway Economics, showed that carload shipments of the commodity last year amounted to 251,211 cars, approximately 7,200 cars above the annual average for the five-year period ending with that year.

Of the 48 states, Maine shipped more white potatoes last year than any other, amounting to 41,751 cars or about 17 per per cent of the United States total. The other principal potato producing states in the order and number of carloads shipped in 1927 were: Minnesota, 31,394; Virginia, 23,650; Idaho, 16,934; Wisconsin, 16,685; Colorado, 15,315; New York, 12,555; Michigan, 10,527.

Connecticut was the only state in the Union from which no carload shipments were made last year.

Distribution of the potato crop is widespread, the survey showed, several states making shipments to as many as 25 other states. Many of the larger markets receive potatoes from 20 or more states. Detroit, for instance, receives potato supply from 27 states, Milwaukee 27, Cleveland, 32; Chicago 36.

New York last year received more potatoes than any other city, total shipments received there amounting to 21,822 cars. Chicago was second with 15,360 cars, Philadelphia, 7,736, Boston, 7,583; Los Angeles 5,227.

Armour Estate Wiped Out Due To Heavy Debt

CHICAGO, May 9 - The once great estate of the late J. Ogden Armour, a few years ago rated as the world's second richest man, has been practically wiped out in payment of his post-war debts, it was learned today.

Mrs. Armour, widow of the late packing king, and her daughter, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, and other relatives have turned over practically the entire estate, including beautiful Melody farm, the family's Lake Forest homesite, to settle obligations of the late head of Armour & Co.

Not only did Mrs. Armour and Mrs. Mitchell turn in almost all the assets of the once vast Armour estate, but they gave much from their personal fortunes to make good obligations incurred by the packing king during the post-war depression period.

Under the settlement, which has just been agreed upon, Armour & Co., is free to dispose of 1,000,000 shares of class B stock and 300,000 shares of class A stock, which has been held by the company against loans to Mr. Armour for other investments.

At one time Mr Armour owned 70 per cent of the $100,000,000 of common stock in Armour & Co.

The settlement of the late packing king's obligations to Armour & Co was declared by F. Edson White, president to be entirely satisfactory.

Mrs. Armour also waived claim to $6,000,000 of land warrants held against the Sutter Basin Co., which Mr. Armour organized as a land reclamation project in California.

Our ideals help to make our ambitions real.

BIG FIVE OF AMERICA HAS GOLFING DAY

Bill Melhorn, Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen Turn In Great Scores.

SANDWICH, May 9 — America's Big Five of its invading golf team shot the legs out from under the early finishers in the first round of the British open golf championship today, Bill Mehlhorn shooting a 35-36-71, Gene Sarazen a 35-37-72 and Walter Hagen a 38-37-75. Mehlhorn and Sarazan thus placed themselves one-two in the early going with Hagen hovering in the first five. Abe Mitchell, one of England's main dependencies, shot a 78 while the Americans were firing their competitive Roman candles.

Mehlhorn simply ran riot through the round, approaching with startling accuracy and dropping putts of all sizes and angles. This kind of play carried him to the turn in 35, one over the seemingly immune par for the outgoing nine. By comparison, Sarazen's was a fighting round, for the wind often carried him away from his objective and he had to make startling recoveries to stay near par. In addition, he was none too lucky during the homecoming journey. Hagen's 75 répresented what might be termed ordinary but steady golf. Walter, however, was putting well, as usual.

Mehlhorn lost his direction in the wind at the 11th but came back at the 12th with a vengeance, getting a 3 as a result of a great iron shot and the sinking of a 25-foot putt. Otherwise Bill's perfect approaching, long drives and sound putting made his play seem uneventful. He experienced almost no difficulty with the tricky greens, only twice taking as many as three putts.

His card:—

Out— 5 3 3 4 4 4 5 5 4—35
In— 4 5 3 4 5 5 3 4 4— 71

Starting for home, Hagen continued to score well, if not sensationally. He got two 4's and a 3 on the first three incoming holes and his gallery began to entertain visions of one of those typical Hagen rushes to the finish. But it was not to be. The Haig, however, supplied a bit of fireworks at both the 11th and 13th. At the former he hit a beautifully crisp iron right on the pin and got a birdie 3 while the 13th saw him put his third into a bunker, chip out and then drop a curly 20-footer right into the can.

His card:

Out— 5 4 4 3 3 3 5 4 5—37
In— 3 3 4 5 5 5 3 4 5—38

UNDERWOOD SUFFERS INDIGESTION ATTACK

WASHINGTON, May 9 —Representative Mell G. Underwood, of Ohio, suffered an attack of acute indigestion when sitting in the House rest room yesterday and was carried on a stretcher to the Sergeant-at-Arms' office, where first aid was administered by physicians.

Dr. A. T. McCormack, secretary of the Kentucky state board of health, was the first to reach Mr. Underwood. Later Representatives John J. Kindred, of New York, and Ed. M. Irwin, of Illinois also were called in. The physicians believed that the attack would not prove to be serious.

Mr. Underwood later was taken to the naval hospital in an ambulance.

HERRON STARTS FIGHT FOR LIFE

NEW PHILADELPHIA, May 9—Death in the electric chair will be demanded today by Prosecutor James E. Patrick in opening the state's case against William D. Herron, charged with murder of his sister-in-law, Viola May.

Patrick will base his plea upon the contention that the girl died in Herron's auto following a criminal assault and was afterward thrown into the Tuscarawas river.

Interest in the Herron trial flared anew as the actual fight for the former painter's life was to get under way with the preliminary addresses to the jury by the state and defense.

Early today spectators began arriving in front of the court house in the hope of being admitted to the trial. Scores were facing disappointment as Judge Lindsey has ruled that only 90 persons will be allowed to occupy chairs in the room— the actual seating capacity.

SEQUEL TO "WINGS"

Characterized as the companion picture to "Wings," Paramount's great epic of the air, "The Legion of the Condemned," another story of the War from the standpoint of the aviator, comes to the Metropolitan theatre today for a three days' run.

Here is a story that differs entirely in story content from the famous roadshow, but in color, romance, characterization and downright thrills, "The Legion of the Condemned" has taken its place right up alongside the production which is still standing them up in the larger cities.

Like "Wings," the tale is from the pen of John Monk Saunders, a member of the United States Air corps during the War, and is directed by William Wellman, who saw service with the Lafayette Squadron and who is credited with the direction of "Wings."

The photoplay deals with an unattached flying unit at the French front, composed of men who, becaus of their dark pasts, wanted to die. Their daring exploits were the talk of the War. Nothing was too hazardous as an undertaking. Into this group of men who welcomed death comes Gary Cooper as the young American newspaperman, betrayed by his sweetheart. The high spot shows Cooper forced to carry his ex-sweetheart across the German lines as a spy.

The M. E. Sunday School will observe Mother's Day next Sunday afternoon. The present Mother's Day came from Frank E. Hering of South Bend, Ind., and as time goes on the day becomes more sacred. There is no thought so unselfish as a Mothers' thought. There is no care so constant as a Mothers' care. There is no love so never ending as a Mothers' love. There is no word that holds so much tender thought as the word Mother. We can carry our appreciation of her into action by standing for the principals she exemplifies. Mother's Day should be a sacred day and serve as part payment for the great debt which we all owe our Mother.

Eight Pickaway-Co. Residents Found To Have Tuberculosis, Report Shows.

The tubercular clinic conducted by the state department of health at St. Philip's Parish House, closed Wednesday evening having given two days' services to Pickaway-co. The final figures at noon on Wednesday disclosed the fact that there are many unrecognized cases of tuberculosis in Circleville.

There were 33 applicants examined by Dr. F. C. Anderson of Mt. Vernon, O., and Dr. J. A. Frank, and 8 were found positive for tuberculosis, while ten were classified as suspicious.

If this group can be kept under the supervision of the family physician and the necessary aid given to them as a whole, further development of the disease may be avoided. This aid may be the education of the patient and his family by the family physician, usually through the public health nurse. In some cases sanatorium treatment may be necessary. It is to accomplish such a purpose that the charts with the diagnostic findings, in every case, are referred back to the family physician.

If tuberculosis is to be taken from the class of hopeless diseases, these patients must receive the same careful treatment that would be afforded them in the beginning of an acute illness such as typhoid fever or appendicitis. The personal hygiene of the patient is an important factor in preventing the spread of the disease.

The bacilli bearing discharges from the infected persons are the means of infecting others. These persons must be instructed in the right method of living and in the measures for the prevention of the spread of the disease. If such care can not be effectively given in the home the patient should be urged to enter a sanatorium for treatment and instruction.

WHITE POTATOES SHOW INCREASES; MAINE IS AHEAD

Car Load Shipments Past Year Amount To 251,211 Bureau Finds.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—A study of the white potato industry and the relationship of prices to transportation costs, completed Wednesday by the Bureau of Railway Economics, showed that carload shipments of the commodity last year amounted to 251,211 cars, approximately 7,200 cars above the annual average for the five-year period ending with that year.

Of the 48 states, Maine shipped more white potatoes last year than any other, amounting to 41,751 cars or about 17 per per cent of the United States total. The other principal potato producing states in the order and number of carloads shipped in 1927 were: Minnesota, 31,394; Virginia, 23,650; Idaho, 16,934; Wisconsin, 16,685; Colorado, 15,313; New York, 12,535; Michigan, 10,525.

Connecticut was the only state in the Union from which no carload shipments were made last year.

Distribution of the potato crop is widespread, the survey showed, several states making shipments to as many as 25 other states. Many of the larger markets receive potatoes from 20 or more states. Detroit, for instance, received its potato supply from 27 states; Milwaukee, 27; Cleveland, 32; Chicago, 36.

New York last year received more potatoes than any other city, rail shipments received there amounting to 21,822 cars. Chicago was second with 15,360 cars; Philaelphia, 7,736; Boston, 7,533; Los Angeles, 5,227.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

The extraordinary welcome accorded the return of baseball to Montreal with the opening of the new International League park there will be remembered as the outstanding event of the 1928 season.

While George Stallings was driving the team to play winning ball, Walter Hapgood was urging on the masons, the carpenters and the toilers in mud and sand who were laboring over-time to get the new park ready. A week ago, one would have insisted there was no chance of it being finished by May 2, the date of the opening. But while the Royals were hustling to win ball games, the builders back home in Montreal were hustling to be ready for the club upon its arrival, and the thing was accomplished.

The enthusiasm with which the good folk of Montreal greeted their ball club indicates that the national pastime of United States is practically certain to prove a success across the border. The Montreal Royals undoubtedly will join the Toronto Maple Leafs in assisting to make it so

Canada sent us her national game a little ago, and as a professional sport hockey now is nearing the crest of popularity in our own country.

The National Hockey league games were played to capacity houses for the most part ,and the success of the New York Rangers in bringing away the Stanley Cup is certain to increase interest in hockey in the United States next season.

It may be that the Montreal Royals will walk away with the International League pennant, thus paying us back in our own coin. The club has a chance of doing so, with Stallings at the helm. While a number of International League teams look stronger than the Royals at the present writing, no one who remembers the baseball season of 1914 will consider Montreal out of the race.

That was the year when Stallings took the tail-end Boston National League Club by the back of the neck about mid-season and hustled it from last place to first so rapidly that no one believed him human.

"It's a miracle," the fans insisted, and Stallings became the original "Miracle Man" of baseball. And when his Braves went out and salughtered the famed Athletics in four straight games in the world series, well, it seemed just too good to be true.

Considerable credit for the "miracle" must be given, of course, to Dick Rudolph and the other Boston pitchers, but Stallings developed them, and it is certain they weren't winning in the spring of that year. The upward rush of the Boston club did not get under way until July.

Boston fans had hoped that this year's club, with the addition of Rogers Hornsby, Lester Bell and considerable pitching strength, might follow the example of the Braves of 1914. It may yet do so, but thus far it has failed to strike its stride.

ARE YOU SKEPTICAL OF 5c CIGARS?

We don't blame you. Read this:

You've smoked 'em bitter; smoked 'em "flat." You've had 'em crumble in your mouth or burn lopsided. You've probably given up the idea that 5c can buy an enjoyable cigar. But—just to show you that a really fine-tasting, clean-burning cigar can be made for a nickel—we ask you to try Havana Ribbon.

Havana Ribbon is the pride of one of the world's largest cigar manufacturers. As different from ordinary five-centers as juicy-ripe apples are different from green or over-ripe. And that's just the start. It's ripe tobacco—long-filler, well-formed, evenly-laid. No short ends or "scraps." No bitter under-ripe top leaves; no insipid over-ripe bottom leaves. Only choice fully-ripe middle leaves are mellowed and cured to the sweetest, mildest flavor you ever tasted in a cigar selling for so little. Get out a nickel quick. There's a cigar counter near. And the countersign is—Havana Ribbon. Also Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.

STORE OPENING IS BIG SUCCESS

What is said to be the biggest crowd that ever crowded into New Holland for any event packed the Pickaway-co. town Tuesday night to attend the formal opening and party of Kirk's Furniture store. Motorists had difficulty in finding a parking space on any street.

Mr. Ansel Kirkpatrick, owner of the store which has been beautifully remodeled, paid a tribute to newspaper advertising, as one of the big ways he put over his celebration.

A free picture show and dance with concert by the Madison Mills school band featured the night's celebration.

The crowd remained until after midnight when the festivities were brought to a close.—Advt.

COUNTRY AND CITY

A RESEARCH institute is to be established at Columbia university, the purpose of which is to plan for the development of a rural civilization equal in every human aspect to the civilization of cities.

Such an aim as this would have been almost impossible in the days before automobiles, when the rural people were more isolated. But in these times when the rural family can jump into its automobile, and shortly be in the nearest town, attending church, entertainments, society meetings, business organizations, social gatherings, etc., it becomes possible to make a very attractive rural civilization.

To realize this ideal, the country children and young people must have school opportunities as good as those of cities. Some will say that is impossible. However, by transporting chudren to consolidated schools, they are often getting opportunities equal to those provided by cities.

The country district schools should give excellent opportunities, when competent persons are hired as teachers. It may be able to give the personal attention to each pupil which the crowded city school is often unable to give.

The country people will not get so many fine entertainment opportunities. But the radio supplies that need. When libraries and reading rooms are established in all country towns, as they should be, then they have an opportunity which brings culture close to the people.

It will cost some money to provide the rural districts with all the benefits of city life. But people of wealth will live in the country more and more, and their taxes will help provide these advantages.

AMERICA'S BACK YARD

ABOUT half of the back yards of American homes probably more than that ,are very poorly taken care of. Many people who take pains with their front lawn, seem to think that anything goes in the back yard. Many cities suffer loss of reputation, because the back yards alon gthe railroad lines are so disorderly. No one is likely to carry away a favorable impression of a town, if all he sees of it is a succession of back yards full of refuse.

The slovenly back yard reminds one of the man who wears a swell new suit of clothes, beneath which more or less visible is a very dirty shirt. It seems like putting on too many airs thus clean up the front of one's place, while letting the back of it look like a public dump.

A house with a neat back yard made attractive with flowers and foliage, impresses one as the home of culture and refinement. We have a great many such in Circleville.

THE FRANKS FUND

THE late Jacob Franks of Chicago has left a fund of $100,000 to give "pleasure, help and encouragement to boys," as a memorial to his dead son, Bobby, who was murdered by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb.

In the universal horror and indignation that swept the country at the time of that crime, Mr. Franks himself was somewhat overlooked. We failed to sympathize with him as deeply as we should have. Of all the figures in the case, he was the most tragic. He died, it was said, of a broken heart; and who can wonder at it?

His establishment of this memorial fund was a kindly, knightly act. He had lost his own boy; so he hoped to ease the lot of other little boys, giving them some of the happiness of which his own son was robbed.

Old San Francisco

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

The Vasquez ranch is coveted by Buckwell, San Francisco boss. Vasquez won't sell. Buckwell and lawyer, Brandon, plan to void Vasquez land grant. Brandon's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores, Vasquez's beautiful granddaughter, and warns Vasquez of plot. Vasquez spurns warning and informs Terry that Dolores must marry young Spaniard. Terry, heartbroken, goes on spree. Dolores seeks Terry in Frisco's Barbary Coast and is disillusioned. Buckwell meets Dolores and is intrigued. He lures her to Frisco under guise of aiding. Terry saves Dolores and beats Buckwell. Terry is forgiven and takes Dolores home after disclosing that Buckwell is the one trying to evict them.

All three of them, suddenly startled by a noise in the patio, turned toward the doorway to see what was happening. The servant rushed in and stopping before Dolores quickly crossed himself and gasped several times for breath before he could speak.

"They come!" he managed to say. "They carry chains—they drive poles into—the ground by the graves!"

"Hush!" silenced Dolores, with a quick glance toward her Grandfather, who was still dozing at the far end of the big room.

"When did they come?" broke in Terry in an undertone.

"Only now, Senor—there are many of them." And, trembling excitedly, he crossed himself again.

"What is the trouble? Who has come? What do they want?" Don

"I demand that you retreat at once."

Luis knew nothing about the threat to confiscate the Rancho and was completely mystified by the servant's announcement and the alarmed understanding of Dolores and Terry. He stood with mouth agape waiting vainly for someone to explain.

"Some men have come who have no right to be here," explained Terry briefly. "I'll go out and see about it." He put a comforting hand on Dolore's arm for a moment. "It would be unwise to alarm your Grandfather unnecessarily."

"Wait, Senor—" commanded Don Luis, stepping forward authoritatively. "It is my place to intercede for my host, and defend his honor if need be." It was a grand gesture. He was all puffed up with his own importance.

Before Terry could stop him he strode from the room.

"Won't you please go?" Dolores clutched Terry's hands in her excitement, and he was strangely happy to discover that her trust and confidence were in him rather than Don Luis.

"Of course, sweetheart!" And because their love was so new and they thought no one was looking they stole a kiss.

Reluctantly Terry left her, but before he had crossed the patio Dolores called out, "Wait—I'm coming, too!" And she raced after him.

Her unguarded shout awakened Vasquez from his nap with a start. Listening intently and looking all around, he gradually became more thoroughly aroused. Instinct warned that something of importance was occurring. Tossing aside the robes that Dolores had covered over him, he stood up and leaning against the chair for support, looked around the room. His gaze settled on the cowering servant by the doorway.

"What has happened?" Vasquez demanded in a dazed, sleepy voice.

"Senor, there are men outside measuring the land—they think it is their's." The old servant had been a part of the small household for so long that he knew all about their reduced circumstances and present difficulty.

"So—!" exclaimed Vasquez fiercely, "they have come!" His sleep bewildered brain tried to reason things out, and he wondered what had happened to the friend who was going to intercede in their behalf. It was a merciful blessing that he was ignorant of Dolore's trip into San Francisco with Buckwell. The old man's head went up and weakness vanished with his rising indignation.

The Vasquez name and honor were being desecrated; property rights of his first Spanish ancestors in America were being ignored, and all because he was old and alone.

The sagging lines in Vasquez's face became set by the sheer strength and power of his determination. His narrow, drooping shoulders lifted and blurred eyes took on a fierce glint.

"They cannot compel me to leave the home of my fathers. What has happened to the laws created for man's protection?" Vasquez muttered to himself, although the frightened servant cowering in the corner nodded silent agreement to the master he had known since childhood. With lengthened, tottering stride Vasquez strode to the fireplace and lifted his great sword from its niche above the mantle. His thin, colorless lips kissed the beloved inscription on the hilt and the white head bowed as if in prayer. "A Vasquez Avenges a Vasquez!" he said, with a spurt of his youthful vigor, and strode out through the patio, grimly determined to defend his rights.

In the meantime Don Luis approached the surveying crew as they were driving a stake into the hallowed ground of the Vasquez burial plot.

"Stop!" he commanded, holding up a protesting hand as he drew near.

The men looked at him, then at each other as if to say, "Well, what have we here?" They had never come across such a romantic figure in real life.

"As the friend and protector of the noble House of Vasquez," said Don Luis to one of the crew, "I demand that you retreat at once." Drawing himself up with assumed dignity, he scowled menacingly.

The hard boiled Irishman who had been sent along with the surveying crew to drive stakes shifted his quid from one cheek to the other, sized up Don Luis from head to foot and finally spoke through a broad grin. "Aw, beat it—ye young garlic hound."

Forgetting that he had been instructed only to drive stakes, the big Irishman stepped forward to meet the attack with a brawny arm and a hard looking fist.

Don Luis retreated with a few hurried steps, but his high heels caught in the surveyor's chain between the stakes and he fell backward. It was the most ungraceful exit he had ever made. Money, pleasure and dignity were the three most desirable things in Don Luis's code of living and he suffered considerably when the "coarse laborers," as he mentally termed them, broke into spontaneous laughter. Quickly scrambling to his feet he assumed an injured air and hoped that Dolores and Terry had not seen the "accident."

They had, but were too intent upon the issue at hand to laugh or pause and offer sympathy. The one thing they realized was that Don Luis had not been successful in his effort with the men.

"May I ask if you have legal authority to run lines through this property?" asked Terry of the surveyors.

"Sure—we got our orders today to come right out."

All of the men realized that they were dealing with a different character from Don Luis, and the young spokesman did not hesitate to answer truthfully. Besides, he had caught a glimpse of Dolores standing by Terry's side and was willing to prolong the interview if it meant a longer chance to see her. He did not know girls could be so gorgeous.

"Have you a written permit?" questioned Terry.

"Yes, but it's only temporary." He felt in several pockets before he found it, then continued, "I'm told it will be made permanent this afternoon."

Terry accepted the paper and looked it over, a worried frown appearing as he read.

Dolores looked over his shoulder and after a moment asked softly, "What does it mean?"

"It is next to the last step necessary to allow the work of destruction to go ahead."

Terry spoke in a low voice, but the men could hear. In fact, none of them could look away from Dolores. Her beauty was like a miracle, and against the background of the old rancho she seemed a part of another world. The men also saw that her chin quivered and her eyes filled with tears when the young man explained the permit.

NEW SHORT WAVE ADAPTER SAID TO PREVENT STATIC

Test Made and Set Tunes In On London Without Air Disturbance.

DAYTON, O., May 9—A short wave adapter capable of eliminating static and distance in any radio set has been successfully built by E. T. Flewelling, internationally known radio expert. He has been at work on the adapter for several years but it was in the last four months that it has been perfected and tested. The adapter is a very small outfit and inexpensive. Attached to his own radio set Flewelling has been tuning in on London nightly for several weeks. The reception is clear as a bell. Upon a test recently made persons one square away from the set in the Flewelling residence have been enabled to hear the London chimes with great distinctness.

A test was made at WSAI and further tests are being arranged for at that terminal.

In 1925 Flewelling built a one tube sending set which was heard in London and Gasgow. He admits however that the set was not sufficiently dependable to be popular. In that same year Mrs. Flewelling talked from her home in Chicago to her husband who was in Boston, over the one tuber. Briefly the inventor explains his device as one designed to permit laymen interested in radio to pick up all short waves and utilize them on their sets. Another virtue claimed for it is that it makes a single dial set out of all sets as the tuning it done directly upon the adapted. Flewelling also claims that fully 90 per cent of the static is absorbed or taken up. A program from London was greatly enjoyed one night recently while a terrific thunder storm was in progress here, yet there was no interference.

Flewelling says he has also perfected a device to be used in connection with the adapter by means of which television is made possible for any home.

This device is in the final stage of perfection he says.

He announced that a very extensive hook up is being arranged for as a nation wide test of the adapter with an American station rebroadcasting a London program. This is expected to take place next week.

"Stop!" he commanded, holding up a protesting hand as he drew near.

The men looked at him, then at each other as if to say, "Well, what have we here?" They had never come across such a romantic figure in real life.

"As the friend and protector of the noble House of Vasquez," said Don Luis to one of the crew, "I demand that you retreat at once." Drawing himself up with assumed dignity, he scowled menacingly.

The hard boiled Irishman who had been sent along with the surveying crew to drive stakes shifted his quid from one cheek to the other, sized up Don Luis from head to foot and finally spoke through a broad grin, "Aw, beat it—ye young garlic hound."

Forgetting that he had been instructed only to drive stakes, the big Irishman stepped forward to meet the attack with a brawny arm and a hard looking fist.

Don Luis retreated with a few hurried steps, but his high heels caught in the surveyor's chain between the stakes and he fell backward. It was the most ungraceful exit he had ever made. Money, pleasure and dignity were the three most desirable things in Don Luis's code of living and he suffered considerably when the "coarse laborers," as he mentally termed them, broke into spontaneous laughter. Quickly scrambling to his feet he assumed an injured air and hoped that Dolores and Terry had not seen the "accident."

They had, but were too intent upon the issue at hand to laugh or pause and offer sympathy. The one thing they realized was that Don Luis had not been successful in his effort with the men.

"May I ask if you have legal authority to run lines through this property?" asked Terry of the surveyors.

"Sure—we got our orders today to come right out."

All of the men realized that they were dealing with a different character from Don Luis, and the young spokesman did not hesitate to answer truthfully. Besides, he had caught a glimpse of Dolores standing by Terry's side and was willing to prolong the interview if it meant a longer chance to see her. He did not know girls could be so gorgeous.

"Have you a written permit?" questioned Terry.

"Yes, but it's only temporary." He felt in several pockets before he found it, then continued, "I'm told it will be made permanent this afternoon."

Terry accepted the paper and looked it over, a worried frown appearing as he read.

Dolores looked over his shoulder and after a moment asked softly, "What does it mean?"

"It is next to the last step necessary to allow the work of destruction to go ahead."

Terry spoke in a low voice, but the men could hear. In fact, none of them could look away from Dolores. Her beauty was like a miracle, and against the background of the old rancho she seemed a part of another world. The men also saw that her chin quivered and her eyes filled with tears when the young man explained the permit.

NEW SHORT WAVE ADAPTER SAID TO PREVENT STATIC

Test Made and Set Tunes In On London Without Air Disturbance.

DAYTON, O., May 9—A short wave adapter capable of eliminating static and distance in any radio set has been successfully built by E. T. Flewelling, internationally known radio expert. He has been at work on the adapter for several years but it was in the last four months that it has been perfected and tested. The adapter is a very small outfit and inexpensive. Attached to his own radio set Flewelling has been tuning in on London nightly for several weeks. The reception is clear as a bell. Upon a test recently made persons one square away from the set in the Flewelling residence have been enabled to hear the London chimes with great distinctness.

A test was made at WSAI and further tests are being arranged for at that terminal.

In 1925 Flewelling built a one tube sending set which was heard in London and Gasgow. He admits however that the set was not sufficiently dependable to be popular. In that same year Mrs. Flewelling talked from her home in Chicago to her husband who was in Boston, over the one tuber. Briefly the inventor explains his device as one designed to permit laymen interested in radio to pick up all short waves and utilize them on their sets. Another virtue claimed for it is that it makes a single dial set out of all sets as the tuning it done directly upon the adapted. Flewelling also claims that fully 90 per cent of the static is absorbed or taken up. A program from London was greatly enjoyed one night recently while a terrific thunder storm was in progress here, yet there was no interference.

Flewelling says he has also perfected a device to be used in connection with the adapter by means of which television is made possible for any home.

This device is in the final stage of perfection he says.

He announced that a very extensive hook up is being arranged for as a nation wide test of the adapter with an American station rebroadcasting a London program. This is expected to take place next week.

Sanctuary For Birds Will Be Opened Shortly

CLEVELAND, O., May 9—A refuge and sanctuary for birds is to be opened this summer on 1800 acres at Mentor Marsh, Lake-co. state game protecters, John J. Gut and B. A. Davison stated here recently.

Already 70 per cent of land owners have agreed to lease the land to the State Department of Agriculture, fish and game division on condition that the bird's home be well stocked with additional dwellers and protect the birds and wild animals already there.

"The marsh will be stocked with ring-necked pheasants," Gut said. And in addition, Davison added, it is the intention of the game protectors to stock the Chagrin river which runs near the birds' home, with fish, if factory pollution of the stream ceases.

Trout Fry Do Not Migrate

Trout fry, according to an expert on fish culture, have a tendancy to stay near the point where they are planted in a stream, says Gas Logic.

Marion's Paper

was given an opportunity for higher learning so that he might become an industrial leader or enter one of the professions. The most intellectually capable young people of each generation therefore left the farm to become the leaders of the industrial or professional world. The inferior ones were left on the farm to be the parents of the next generation, which generation in turn sent their brighest boys and girls to the city. It was the belief of the average farmer and also the city man that it did not take brains in farming. The ones who were not capable of getting into any other kinds of business,—well, they just farmed. Strong backs, hardy muscles and willingness to work and live in ignorance surrounded by all kinds of inconveniences were at a premium on the farm while in the cities where competition was keen, brains were sought out and paid for in attractive terms. And here is where the trouble started.

Farmers were looked upon by their city cousins as not their equal and were called jay farmers, hay seeds, clod hoppers and rubes. Every newspaper and magazine had him cartooned with a paint brush beard, with his hair long and sometimes growing out the top of his hat, making altogether an unsightly appearance, until the city cousins' children looked upon their country cousins as not their equal in intellect or culture.

The condition today is reversed with 75 per cent and even more of our state population living in our cities. In this connection I want to say right here that in Ohio we have more towns and cities of 5,000 and over than any other state in the Union.

The farm has given up her best to the building up of other industries. Ohio is not West any more. Here in Ohio the industrial East meets the agricultural West. A great change has come about. Centralized schools, high schools and universities are on every side of us. Hard surfaced roads and telephone service lead to nearly every rural home. Daily mail service connects every rural home with the outside world. Railroads, street cars, high powered automobiles and bus lines connect every rural home with our city population. Radios and radio stations give to every farmer a daily market report and weather conditions throughout the United States. Big electrical plants one thousand miles distant send to us our heat, light and power through little mystic wires with which we are joined. We have changed from an isolated rural population to just one large community. Today you can hardly, if at all, tell the city cousin from one of your own family. In personal appearance they were largely look alike and act alike. They must finally come to the time when they shall think alike in terms of a common problem and a common country. Along with this new condition there are new demands.

The farmer must have a much larger income from his farm than he had forty years ago. Where must it come from? From the soil. There are no new soils to go to, so the farmer must build up what he already has. He must go to work to study soils so as to keep that soil up to a high standard of fertility at the least possible cost.

Along with this change in transportation comes a change in the farmer's marketing operations. With his increased marketing operations he runs into keen competition in various lines, any one of which would take up the time of a master mind. But the farmer has to meet these and more.

Transportation, more than any other one thing, has changed our whole rural life. It has brought the markets and nearly every commodity of the world almost to our very doors. Things forty years ago were a wasteful luxury, today they have become a necessity. Present-day demands have changed our whole social life.

The number of friends I have, scattered over the different states today, is greater than the total number I knew in my home community forty years ago. Our children come in contact with more people in one month than our grandparents did in a lifetime. Present-day conditions demand better homes, better churches, better schools, better living conditions in every way. Present-day demands require highly specialized farming, such as vegetable growing under glass, truck farming, poultry raising, orcharding, dairying, nursery culture, floriculture and small fruit growing. In addition to all this there must be a high type general farmer. All of which is calling for the highest type of manhood with the best brains and business management the state can produce.

We need giants in farming as well as giants in industry. The present day demands not more land but a much higher production on what we already farm. How is this to be done? By using more brain power and less man power on the farm. The farmer that can not apply good business judgment on the farm and who does not know soils and how to build them up so as to increase production, so as to cut down his cost of production by increased yields, will have to get off the farm or work as a hired man for the man who is so qualified or else move off the farm into the city and join those thousands who believe that any man can farm and make money.

Education is the Savior of Agriculture. Forty years ago the farmer farmed by signs. He had certain signs for everything that he did. If the sign was not right he did not do it, thus leaving undone a great deal that needed to be done. Today instead of farming by signs it has become scientific farming. Ignorance can not meet the present-day's need.

What the farmer needs is more scientific knowledge of every phase of agriculture. Instead of loafing on the job and expecting that some day Congress will do something miraculous for him, he must study his job with the best intelligence he has, bring to his aid the best thought of every other agency, and work out his own salvation in his own way. A great painter when asked with what he mixed his paints, replied, "With brains, sir." Our agricultural college at our own State university and our experiment station at Wooster and along with all of our farm organizations such as the farm bureau, grange, horticultural society, vegetable growers, poultry organizations, stock breeders' organizations, stock breeders' organization, dairying, nursery interests, floriculture and farm editors of farm papers and magazines and many more, all are playing their part toward a more scientific agriculture.

But what is our agricultural and horticultural colleges preparing to do for this change in our agriculture that is bound to come in Ohio and is here now? The purely grain farmer of Ohio is gone. He has moved west. The scientific intensified farmer has come to take his place. Is the agricultural college and the horticulaural college of our state prepared to meet these new demands? I have known cases where young men of our own state come to look over the opportunities offered by the horticulture college and went home or went to our nearby states, New York or Illinois, who are far superior in equipment, and who employ a much larger number of men on their teaching staff and extension work than Ohio State does. Where do you go to buy? Where they have the best for sale? Look into the horticulture college of either New York or Illinois the number of students enrolled. It speaks for itself. I am not laying any blame on the heads of the departments or professors. We, the state, are to blame. One or two men can not teach a whole state. The agricultural college has helped and is still helping the grain, hog and dairy farmer. We have county agents in nearly every county in Ohio trained by the agricultural college of our state who are doing a wonderful work that we are justly proud of.

But what about the florist, the greenhouse vegetable man, who have the largest acreage of glass or any state in the Union? The greenhouse vegetable men alone have in this state a layout cost of over $25,000,000 and a production value of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 annually. What is the state or horticulture college doing for this industry with one teacher and not a single extension man to go to the help? The florists of this great state are in the same boat, crying for help with only one man mapping his head off to try to improve conditions. What about the young man that wants to specialize in nursery or small fruits? Nothing doing! Isn't it about time that the horticulture college changed its present program for Ohio? Isn't it about time this organization in the midst of the horticultural center which was formed to do this very thing, take up it?

The nursery men with their hundreds of acres of nursery stock, the outside fruit growers, the poultry farmer, the dairy farmer, all of these are right now in the agricultural college asking for help. What is the answer? Why, what they have is for the college of law, college of education, college of engineering or journalism, or what not?

A concerted program based upon the best thought and scientific investigation of the Ohio horticultural council comprised of outstanding representative men in these different specialized groups is certainly warranted to meet this crisis. This program of neccessity means that an organized policy must be presented to our State Legislature to provide appropriations as a means of expanding the service through which equipment, scientific research and men especially equipped to meet these problems in the horticulture department and field specialists may be secured to keep pace with the present-day needs. Does agriculture hold out a future for the young man of tomorrow? It is my judgment that there is a wonderful future for the young man who will follow any one of these highly specialized lines, who first loves his work and who is scientifically trained to meet the requirements of a highly specialized agriculture.

In the industrial and business world on every hand we have outstanding precedents of specialization. The day of the corn and-wheat only farmer has passed in Ohio agriculture. Let us not be neglectful of the opportunities awaiting the specialized farmer.

May our slogan be: More science and brains in agriculture. Forty years ago success on the farm was measured in broad acres and bank accounts. Today service to your community lies in trying to make that community a little better by your having lived in it.

Sanctuary For Birds Will Be Opened Shortly

CLEVELAND, O., May 9—A refuge and sanctuary for birds is to be opened this summer on 1800 acres at Mentor Marsh, Lake-co, state game protectors, John J. Gut and B. A. Davison stated here recently.

Already 70 per cent of land owners have agreed to lease the land to the State Department of Agriculture, fish and game division on condition that the bird's home be well stocked with additional dwellers and protect the birds and wild animals already there.

"The marsh will be stocked with ring-necked pheasants," Gut said. And in addition, Davison added, it is the intention of the game protectors to stock the Chagrin river which runs near the birds' home, with fish, if factory pollution of the stream ceases.

was given an opportunity for higher learning so that he might become an industrial leader or enter one of the professions. The most intellectually capable young people of each generation therefore left the farm to become the leaders of the industrial or professional world. The inferior ones were left on the farm to be the parents of the next generation, which generation in turn sent their brighest boys and girls to the city. It was the belief of the average farmer and also the city man that it did not take brains in farming. The ones who were not capable of getting into any other kinds of business.—well, they just farmed. Strong backs, hardy muscles and willingness to work and live in ignorance surrounded by all kinds of inconveniences were at a premium on the farm while in the cities where competition was keen, brains were sought out and paid for in attractive terms. And here is where the trouble started.

Farmers were looked upon by their city cousins as not their equal and were called jay farmers, hay seeds, clod hoppers and rubes. Every newspaper and magazine had him cartooned with a paint brush, beard, with his hair long and sometimes growing out the top of his hat, making altogether an unsightly appearance, until the city cousins' children looked upon their country cousins as not their equal in intellect or culture.

The condition today is reversed with 75 per cent and even more of our state population living in our cities. In this connection I want to say right here that in Ohio we have more towns and cities of 5,000 and over than any other state in the Union.

The farm has given up her best to the building up of other industries. Ohio is not West any more. Here in Ohio the industrial East meets the agricultural West. A great change has come about. Centralized schools, high schools and universities are on every side of us. Hard surfaced roads and telephone service lead to nearly every rural home. Daily mail service connects every rural home with the outside world. Railroads, street cars, high powered automobiles and bus lines connect every rural home with our city population. Radios and radio stations give to every farmer a daily market report and weather conditions throughout the United States. Big electrical plants one thousand miles distant send to us our heat, light and power through little mystic wires with which we are joined. We have changed from an isolated rural population to just one large community. Today you can hardly, if at all, tell the city cousin from one of your own family. In personal appearance they were largely look alike and act alike. They must finaliv come to the time when they shall think alike in terms of a common problem and a common country. Along with this new condition there are new demands.

The farmer must have a much larger income from his farm than he had forty years ago. Where must it come from? From the soil. There are no new soils to go to, so the farmer must build up what he already has. He must go to work to study soils so as to keep that soil up to a high standard of fertility at the least possible cost.

Along with this change in transportation comes a change in the farmer's marketing operations. With his increased marketing operations he runs into keen competition in various lines, any one of which would take up the time of a master mind. But the farmer has to meet these and more.

Transportation, more than any other one thing, has changed our whole rural life. It has brought the markets and nearly every commodity of the world almost to our very doors. Things forty years ago were a wasteful luxury, today they have become a necessity. Present-day demands have changed our whole social life.

The number of friends I have, scattered over the different states today, is greater than the total number I knew in my home community forty years ago. Our children come in contact with more people in one month than our grandparents did in a lifetime. Present-day conditions demand better homes, better churches, better schools, better living conditions in every way. Present-day demands require highly specialized farming, such as vegetable growing under glass, truck farming, poultry raising, orcharding, dairying, nursery culture, floriculture and small fruit growing. In addition to all this there must be a high type general farmer. All of which is calling for the highest type of manhood with the best brains and business management the state can produce.

We need giants in farming as well as giants in industry. The present day demands not more land but a much higher production on what we already farm. How is this to be done? By using more brain power and less man power on the farm. The farmer that can not apply good business judgment on the farm and who does not know soils and how to build them up so as to increase production, so as to cut down his cost of production by increased yields, will have to get off the farm or work as a hired man for the man who is so qualified ,or else move off the farm into the city and join those thousands who believe that any man can farm and make money.

Education is the Savior of Agriculture. Forty years ago the farmer farmed by signs. He had certain signs for everything that he did. If the sign was not right he did not do it, thus leaving undone a great deal that needed to be done. Today instead of farming by signs it has become scientific farming. Ignorance can not meet the present-day's need.

What the farmer needs is more scientific knowledge of every phase of agriculture. Instead of loafing on the job and expecting that some day Congress will do something miraculous for him, he must study his job with the best intelligence he has, bring to his aid the best thought of every other agency, and work out his own salvation in his own way. A great painter when asked with what he mixed his paints, replied, "With brains, sir." Our agricultural college at our own State university and our experiment station at Wooster and along with all of our farm organizations such as the farm bureau, grange, horticultural society, vegetable growers, poultry organizations, stock breeders' organizations, stock breeders' organization, dairying, nursery interests, floriculture and farm editors of farm papers and magazines and many more, all are playing their part toward a more scientific agriculture.

But what is our agricultural and horticultural colleges preparing to do for this change in our agriculture that is bound to come in Ohio and is here now? The purely grain farmer of Ohio is gone. He has moved west. The scientific intensified farmer has come to take his place. Is the agricultural college and the horticulaural college of our state prepared to meet these new demands? I have known cases where young men of our own state come to look over the opportunities offered by the horticulture college and went home or went to our nearby states, New York or Illinois, who are far superior in equipment, and who employ a much larger number of men on their teaching staff and extension work than Ohio State does. Where do you go to buy? Where they have the best for sale? Look into the horticulture college of either New York or Illinois ,the number of students enrolled. It speaks for itself. I am not laying any blame on the heads of the departments or professors. We, the state, are to blame. One or two men can not teach a whole state. The agricultural college has helped and is still helping the grain, hog and dairy farmer. We have county agents in nearly every county in Ohio trained by the agricultural college of our state who are doing a wonderful work that we are justly proud of.

But what about the florist, the greenhouse vegetable man, who have the largest acreage of glass or any state in the Union? The greenhouse vegetable men alone have in this state a layout cost of over $25,000,000 and a production value of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 annually. What is the state or horticulture college doing for this industry—with one teacher and not a single extension man to go to for help? The florists of this great state are in the same boat, crying for help with only one man working his head off to try to improve conditions. What about the young man that wants to specialize in nursery or small fruits? Nothing doing! Isn't it about time that the horticulture folks of Ohio unite their organizations together and demand a larger and better horticultural program for Ohio? We have this organization in the name of the horticultural council which was formed to do this very thing. Let's use it.

The nursery men with their hundreds of acres of nursery, the tree fruits, the small fruits, the outside truck gardener, the poultry farmer, dairy farmer ,all of these are highly specialized and intensified farmers. What is the agriculture and horticultural departments going to do for these industries in the future? Just what they have in the past? Whose State University is this? Is it for the college of law, college of education, college of engineering or journalism, or what not?

A concerted program based upon the best thought and scientific investigation of the Ohio horticultural council comprised of outstanding representative men in these different specialized groups is certainly warranted to meet this crisis. This program of necessity means that an organized policy must be presented to our State Legislature to provide appropriations as a means of expanding the service through which equipment, scientific research and men especially equipped to meet these problems in the horticulture department and field specialists may be secured to keep pace with the present-day needs. Does agriculture hold out a future for the young man of tomorrow? It is my judgment that there is a wonderful future for the young man who will follow any one of these highly specialized lines, who first loves his work and who is scientifically trained to meet the requirements of a highly specialized agriculture.

In the industrial and business world on every hand we have outstanding precedents of specialization . The day of the corn and-wheat only farmer has passed in Ohio agriculture. Let us not be neglectful of the opportunities awaiting the specialized farmer.

May our slogan be: More science and brains in agriculture. Forty years ago success on the farm was measured in broad acres and bank accounts. Today service to your community lies in trying to make that community a little better by your having lived in it.
